

Wild Welfare Privacy Policy

Wild Welfare respects the privacy of its supporters, members and partners and has policies in place to ensure their data is looked after. Any information shared with us will be kept secure and only used for the purposes intended. We will not sell or pass on any personal information to third parties for direct marketing purposes.

If you wish for the data we hold on you to be removed from our databases, please email us at dataprotection@wildwelfare.org or fill in our contact form HERE.

Our website collects personal data such as names, email addresses, and other personal information from you only when submitted via our online contact forms. This data is used solely by Wild Welfare and is not shared, traded, or sold to any third parties.

Our website also collects non-personal data through the use of a 'cookies'. You can read more details in our Cookie policy.

Our web-server does record IP addresses from all visitors to our site. An IP address is a number that is automatically assigned to your computer when you use the internet. We use IP addresses to help diagnose problems with our server, to administer our site, to analyse trends, to track user movement through our website, and to gather broad demographic information - all for the purpose of continually improving our website and delivering custom content. IP addresses are not linked to personally identifiable information, and their collection is standard procedure in most web-server environments.

Our website does contain links to other websites. Please be aware that when you click on one of these links, you are entering another website, for which Wild Welfare is not responsible.

By using <https://wildwelfare.org/>, you signify your agreement to our Privacy Policy as stated above. Note that this policy may be revised periodically without notice and all subsequent updated policies will be available on this web page.
